Our Change of Watch (COW) dinner in November at Trader Vic’s was a wonderful event with great food and drink that accompanied a spirit of optimism for this year’s program. Thank you all that helped with the COW event with special acknowledgement to Vice Commodore, Scott Andrews; Candice Gable who handled the Silent Auction; and David and Leigh Teece for the donation of all the dinner wine from their Mt. Beautiful Winery. Our Fleet is blessed to have dedicated officers including our Vice Commodore, Scott Andrews, Rear Commodore, Bernadette Sweeney, Historian, Jim Hackworth; Treasurer, Tom Clothier; and our Corresponding Secretary, Nancy Clothier who is also the publisher of our Newsletter, Classic Currents. Our Port Captains; Patrick Welch, Stuart Kiehl, George Homenko, Bill Wells, and Tom Clothier are committed to improving our membership.

Let me take this opportunity to introduce our newest members to the fleet. Let’s give a rousing welcome to Marc Harrington who owns a 50’ Stephens Cruiser, Navillus V, Jonathan Arambel who owns a 43’ Stephens Cruiser, Firebird, Robert Sesar and Roberta Montero who purchased a 34’ 1928 Stephens, SKAL. Welcome aboard to these captains and their crews.

As part of this year’s watch, our Fleet has the responsibility to plan and host the 2019 International Change of Watch (ICOW) for January 17, 18, 19, & 20, so mark your calendars! Our Fleet Bridge jumped on this task and ICOW committee has been formed that includes: Alan Almquist, Bill Wells, Jonathan Arambel, Rusty Areias, Cynthia McMillen, Tom Clothier, Nancy Clothier, Scott Andrews, Susan Takami, and George Homenko. An announcement will be made later with dates and time for some of the events that have been planned so far. We are all thrilled to announce that the location of ICOW for 2019 will be in Sacramento! For those members in our Fleet who live in Sacramento, we will have a lot to show off.

This year’s event schedule is truly focused on quality not quantity. Already there is excitement building for each of these events that are located in both the Bay and Delta. Below is this year’s event lineup:

April 6, 7, and 8th – Grindstone Joe’s Cruise-In and our 2nd 2018 Bridge Meeting. Contact Scott Andrews (Scott@Cogenia.com) or Gerry Kamilos (gkamilos@kamilos.com) for information.

Grindstone Joe’s is a lovely historic private island in the Delta near the Tower Marina just off of Highway 12 near I-5. It’s easy to get to by classic yacht or land yacht. This has been a stop for yachtsmen and yachtswomen since the 1920’s. Everyone has to go to Grindstone Joe’s at least once.

April 22nd - 101st Opening Day of the Bay - our annual fleet potluck gathering after the parade will be at a yet to be determined marina on the Bay. For information to participate in the parade or the gathering afterwards please contact Steve.
It looks like we are headed to an early boating season in the Delta. The weather has been spectacular and some are speculating that California is headed to another drought. Lately the legendary tule fog is almost nonexistent. A few short years ago the region would be blanketed in fog for much of the winter and early spring.

One April we were headed to the opening day parade at the San Joaquin Yacht Club and ran into a massive fog bank right at the Rio Vista Bridge. We hove to while we contemplated what to do when suddenly the fog lifted and we continued our journey, we arrived at the parade just as it started and slid into our position just like we had planned it that way.

The hyacinth and other invasive plants that blanketed the Delta in recent years have been brought under control thanks to the Division of Boating & Waterways with plenty of citizen oversight. There is an active reporting system and they have a team in place to combat the pests.

There are plenty of fun events taking place in the Delta this summer. The Stockton Yacht Club is holding their Car and Boat Show on June 23rd. This show continues to grow each year, classic yachts are definitely invited. They have some great classic cars too.

Barron Hilton has announced that his fireworks display will be held on Wednesday July 4th this year at Mandeville Island on the San Joaquin River. I think this is the 60th anniversary of this event that brings 3,000 or so boats from all over California to participate. Hilton started this in 1958 when he brought some fireworks to set off for his children. He said boats stopped by to watch and every year he kept increasing the amount of fireworks until now they bring a barge load up to the island and it has turned into a multi day extravaganza with the Coast Guard and local law enforcement on hand to make sure things don’t get out of control.

The Stephens Yacht Rendezvous will be on the weekend of August 3rd, 4th and 5th at Village West Marina in Stockton. We have had many excellent events at this venue over the years and the Pellarin brothers that have owned the marina for a few years now are very supportive of classic yachts. Vickie Baumann, the manager who is part owner of Delta Marina in Rio Vista is a good friend of ours also. If you have not seen the marina for a while you will be amazed. They have removed tons of junk and unwanted vegetation. The marina now is a garden spot, there are even cabins for rent.

The 17th annual Taste of the Delta will be on August 4th at Village West Marina. This will showcase local wineries, restaurants, and artists. This event will dovetail nicely with the Stephens Rendezvous and both events will attract a good crowd of boat lovers and wine enthusiasts.

There are plenty of other events taking place in the Delta check the chamber website californiadelta.org for information.
There is much going on at the PICYA and RBOC. Here are items of interest to the NC fleet.

The PICYA Change of Watch and Commodore’s Ball were held at the Sequoia Yacht Club in Redwood City on January 27th.

(See attached photo of your delegates on the job.) Winston Bumpus was installed as 2018 Commodore and a number of annual PICYA awards were presented.

The first delegates meeting of the year took place on February 5th at the Discovery Bay Yacht Club.

Secretarial Consultant Lynda Myers pointed out that all club commodores need to submit a letter to her identifying the names of their PICYA delegates for 2018.

PICYA annual membership dues have been increased. Payment is due March 31st. The treasury report indicates that the organization is “a little ahead of last year”.

It was announced that planning for Opening Day on the Bay (scheduled for April 22nd) is well underway. This year’s theme will be “Nations on the Bay”. A meeting is scheduled to coordinate the Corinthian YC blessing of the pleasure fleet with the other activities.

The RBOC’s Legislature Days (for meetings with State lawmakers to review pending actions bearing on recreational boating) took place in Sacramento February 20th to 26th.

The PICYA has a 10 minute powerpoint presentation available for club viewing that outlines RBOC activities. The RBOC continues its focus on managing invasive species, particularly by spraying herbicides in Delta waterways. A recent major success was securing a $4.25 million dollar refund from California State Parks to clean water and recreational boating programs.

The new California State boater certification program safety classes became available on January 1st.

The 2018 Yachting Yearbook is being prepared. The deadline for submissions has been extended to March 1st. I am assembling the NC Fleet input with roster information provided by Nancy Clothier.

The Annual Mariners Sunday service, featuring the St. Francis Y.C. Sons of the Sea choir, was held at 10 a.m. on March 4th at St. Luke’s Presbyterian Church, 10 Bayview Drive, San Rafael, followed by great brunch at the nearby Loch Lomond Y.C.

Revised PICYA rules for yacht clubs to accumulate points for awards will be released next month.

The PICYA website is a great place to publicize events at no cost to member clubs. The website also has forms for applicants to the PICYA scholarship program and instructions for making donations.

The Stockton Y.C.is supporting the Make A Wish Foundation on May 26th with a goal of raising $10,000.

Two clubs made RBOC donations at this meeting, one of $395 and another of $120.

While not an official bit of business it is worth noting that the delegate from Benicia Yacht Club advised me that the fuel dock in Benicia continues to sell diesel oil but is no longer selling gasoline. Vessels needing gasoline en route to the Delta must now continue on to Pittsburg for fuel.

The next two delegates meetings will be at the Richmond YC in March, followed by the Stockton Y.C in April.

International Change of Watch—Commodore Scott Andrews

Note from the International Commodore:

I was very pleased to take the helm as International Commodore of the Classic Yacht Association at the Change of Watch event hosted by the Southern California Fleet in Marina Del Rey, CA a few weeks ago. In addition to a lovely dinner, and a very collegial set of Board meetings, we were treated to a fun boat ride in Marina Del Rey Harbor and Santa Monica bay. Susan and I were lucky to have boarded ATHENA, a beautifully restored 1929 47’ Stephens. It was a beautiful day, and we were able to see the entire Los Angeles basin from the ocean to the mountains.

CYA website: http://www.classicyacht.org
Atlas Gas Engine Company was founded in 1904 by former employees of another San Francisco early engine maker, Hercules Gas Engine Works. Atlas was in business for only two years when the Great San Francisco Earthquake struck in 1906. The company then relocated to Oakland where a new factory was built at 11th Ave. and East 9th St. ultimately covering over 15 acres. Marine engines were added to the line and by 1909 the company was generating revenues of over one million dollars. One, two, three and four cylinder engines were offered from 4 ½ to 200 HP. Atlas began development of a diesel engine in 1914 and by 1916 with their diesels now well advanced the company merged with the Imperial Gas Engine Company to become Atlas Imperial. Imperial was another San Francisco found- ed engine company located between Clementina and Tehama streets a few blocks from the water front. Production line prices rising to 20 cents a gallon while fuel oil just a nickel both companies saw benefits in merging to work on the new diesel products.

The first Atlas diesel a six cylinder 4580 cubic inch engine was built and installed in the Seattle Ferry Vashon Island, and continued to power that vessel until after WW II. In 1919 the technological breakthrough of the solid injection fuel system in which fuel pressure was maintained by mechanical pumps that fed injector nozzles into the cylinders made the marine diesel finally practical. The original classic apple-green painted Atlas-Imperial diesel originally turned at about 350 rpm and came in models from two to six cylinders. During the mid-1930’s more modern looking engines with the works enclosed were designed and the rpm’s increased to around 900. Smaller engines were later built along with the larger power plants at a factory constructed in Mattoon, Illinois. The Atlas Company didn’t survive much beyond the end of WW II, a consequence of competition with the high-speed, light weight diesels that were being developed by General Motors. Around 1950 White Superior bought the company to get the name and the right to make spare parts for those engines some of which are still in operation today powering tug boats that were launched during the 1920’s.

This year at the International Change of Watch in Marina del Rey I was fortunate enough to see a pair of these gigantic Atlas-Imperial engines fully operational, originally installed on the yacht Sobre Las Olas. While this yacht was built in Southern California at the Wilmington Boat Works, her diesels were hauled down from Oakland and installed in the vessel in 1929. Like most of our classic yachts, Sobre las Olas has many stories to tell. Two of her famous owners were J. Paul Getty and William Randolph Hearst. The opening reception of the 2018 ICOW was held aboard this beautifully restored yacht, and our hosts and current owners, Sean Connolly and Jeff Ganter, graciously welcomed the delegation aboard to enjoy fine wines and good food and a tour of the vessel from stem to stern.
The yacht has been meticulously restored with a good eye towards maintaining its original charm and historic character. A substantial feat to accomplish indeed.

Much of the research on Atlas-Imperial engines along with information on numerous engine makers in North America can be found in the well-documented encyclopedia, American Marine Engines 1885-1950, by Stan Grayson. Published by Devereux Press, Marblehead, MA 2008. This is a must-have volume for any classic yacht owner who wishes to gain knowledge about the engines that once, and perhaps, still do power our yachts.

The second Bridge meeting of NCCYA will be held at the iconic delta retreat known as Grindstone Joes on April 7th. We want to encourage all members to attend this meeting and take the opportunity to witness a very colorful part of delta history. The history of this now private retreat began with an individual who was named Joe Atello (or Attel - no one knows for sure), a Chilean in his early thirties, who arrived in the Terminous area in a sail-rigged rowboat sometime around the 1906 earthquake. Joe told boating friends later that he had jumped ship in San Francisco harbor, going AWOL from the Chilean navy.

Taking on a partner of unknown history, these men survived in the delta by netting for sturgeon, bass and catfish on the then-flooded Bouldin Island while establishing squatters' rights on what is now the Grindstone Joe island. The partnership soured later on when Joe discovered his partner was skimming profits from the sales of fish in the Lodi and Stockton markets, he threw the man out. According to legend the untrustworthy partner left, but not before destroying an indispensable tool of their trade, a grinding wheel. The grindstone fragment became a symbol of Joe's integrity and much later the source of the Island Association's name. The famous grindstone can be seen today permanently mounted on the club deck and reproduced on the club burgee.

Starting in the late 1920's with net-fishing banned, Joe had to augment his meager income, so by brute strength and stamina he worked with shovel and wheelbarrow to build up his island and, most importantly, create a roadway link between the island and the levee. He planted trees and flowers and snagged floating timbers to create the first docks which attracted early boaters from the valley and the bay area.

But from all reports Joe was very particular about whom he would allow to use his docks. He had hard and fast rules which he insisted must be observed or a guest could forget about returning. For one reason or another he disliked sailboats. He was a stickler for good conduct, warning transgressors "If you come back, I cut your line." He kept his island immaculate and ruled it with an iron hand. Any boaters who respected that the island was his home had no trouble getting along with him, but those who treated the island as a public picnic and dumping ground were unceremoniously asked to leave and admonished not to return. Despite his reputation of a man not to be crossed, Joe reportedly increased his income about $200 per month from the boaters who visited his docks.

By 1929, based on surviving photos, about nine power boats regularly docked at his island in the summer. Joe served this dedicated group of boaters up to the time of his death on July 31, 1944. Following the war, many of the same boaters returned and organized what later became the Grindstone Joe Association. They organized the fledgling group into a non-profit Corporation and arranged to acquire clear title to the "island" for recreational purposes.

Today, Grindstone Joe's is a private island in the "delta" owned and managed by the Grindstone Joe Association.

Cruise to Petaluma—May 18, 19 & 20

Mark your calendars, the CYA will be making our annual pilgrimage to the Petaluma Turning Basin to coincide with Cruisin' the Boulevard. Cruisin' the Boulevard is a salute to the film American Graffiti with a massive car show and parade on Saturday the 19th. Petaluma being the primary filming location for this iconic George Lucas movie.

Friday night will be a Bar B-Q at the Petaluma Yacht Club with members supplying hors d'oeuvre, salad and dessert. Saturday dining will be at one of the fine eateries that line the turning basin.

As many of you may know the Petaluma Turning Basin has some severe silting problems. I will be sounding the course to be sure we have enough water to make the journey. More information will be sent out to the membership after I complete these soundings. Keep your fingers crossed. George Homenko, Chair
